FLINT, Michigan -- A Flint man was found guilty of second-degree murder Friday in the Aug. 22, 2007, slaying of a man on Cecil Drive near Polly Street in Flint.

Anthony L. King was also convicted on a weapons charge in the case.

The victim, Gene Marsh, 38, of Flint, was found in the street after neighbors heard a gunshot.

A Flint district judge had called the case circumstantial but witnesses placed King at the scene of the shooting. King is set to be sentenced at 2 p.m. on May 5.
